

Dear Lucas,

There have been many developments since we last spoke. As of right now we currently have a Lighthouse score of 73, for the stage that we are at this is okay. In a perfect world we would be above the 89-point mark however various challenges presented themselves over the course of project which we have either solved or are currently solving. By next week we should hit a minimum score of 89 points on Lighthouse. We took your request to heart and have been busily working on the new web page. It contains a sliding image portfolio along with a form submission section containing a button with animation offering a more satisfying and stimulating UX for all that visit the website. We felt this page would be best suited as a stand-alone booking page and for this reason we made a slight alteration of the original request. We separated the booking page from the new information on the blind skateboarder as we felt the information on the skateboarder would be better suited on the about section of the website. We have also made leaps and bounds of progress towards the accessibility of our website on different devices by making use of various techniques such as replacing hard coded positions with percentages and using a flex box.

Link to website on GitHub pages